GRAIN PRICES, UP AND DOWN.

Wheat rises spectacularly in price, and the joyful farmers thereupon prepare to plant wheat more heavily in the fall and spring.

It is a perfectly natural thing to do, in the circumstances. It is human nature, out of which springs economic law. Every man, seeing profit ahead along a certain line, wants to follow that line and make more profit. So groups of men, operating as individuals of their own free choice, proceed to defeat their own good luck and change the situation.

Wheat commanded high prices during the war and for some time afterward. That led inevitably to the planting of a large acreage in wheat. the United States. Our system nominations is not the outcome of chance. It is the product of experience. Very early in their search for a sound method of self-government the American people discovered that the only practical way to secure re sponsible political action was by the formation of parties, which they adopted because reason pronounced it the most promising, and continued because practice found it the most successful.

Underneath and upholding political parties was, and is, the enduring principle that a true citizen of a real Republic can not exist as a segregated, unattached fragment of selfishness, but must live as a constituent part of the whole of society, in which he can secure his own welfare only as he secures the welfare of his fellow

Your Tennis Shoe

In the days when sport was spindly in the legs and sportsmen were banana fingered, there were no clearly defined styles for different games. One dressed much as the leather-faced fisherman does-in any old thing or anything old. Indeed, the tyro was almost ashamed to be well-turned-out lest the difference between his get-up and his game become too noticeable. Sporting clothes have had to take many a knock-down from prejudice and ridicule before they won "a place in the sun." Today, the type of dress worn for tennis and golf and polo and vachting, the rich man's sports, are as distinct from one another as clothes worn in the ballroom are apart from those worn in the backwoods.

Touch-and-go tennis is pre-eminently the young man's game, or, at least, you must have played it from youth up to keep it up. Therefore, the styles for tennis are essentially young men's styles with the freedom and flexibility that this sport demands. Instead of white flannel trousers, gray flannels are now often worn or white duck "slacks." The favorite shirt is that of white cheviot having wide elbow-length sleeves and a soft collar left open at the throat. A very practical garment is that made with shirt and drawers in one combination style. This prevents the shirt from riding up, as it has a disconcerting trick of doing during play. Another type of shirt has a lengthwise expanding pleat down the centre for unhindered arm-swing and body-play. The tennis belt is of white webbing cloth or white silk finished with a buckle and leather tongue. Brightly striped belts in blazer colors are also much worn this season.

Coming down to hosiery and shoes, plain or ribbed socks of cashmere or worsted, not silk, should be worn, as silk is slippery and non-absorbent. Two types of white or brown canvas or duck tennis shoes are reproduced here-high and low. Each is preferred by some players. The low shoe, popularly termed "sneaker," is more in use. The soles are rubber which makes them extremely pliable. These shoes are 5 inches high and weigh only 15 to 19 ounces. Some high shoes are provided with re-inforcements at the inside ankles. Only the best qualities should be chosen for comfort and wear.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the railroad station when they run out of gasoline. The occupants of a passing car refuse to lend them any, and the Wreck takes five gallons at the point of a gun.

Later they are held captive at a ranch along the way because Charlie McSween, the foreman, wants Sally for a cook. They discover that Mr. Underwood, the wealthy New York cowner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up, and that he and his boy and girl are to stay at the ranch for several weeks. At the risk of being recognized, the Wreck waits on the party in the dining room and hears them notify Sheriff Rob Wells, who is Sally's fiance, of the robbery whole thing to Sally, with a lot of words that she did not understand; and while he was talking about pitted and while he was talking about the was joint and what he was going to do to ft, she also learned that he was behaved when they had a dude on their hands. But she hoped that Charley was right, because the Wreck was not a patient young man and there was no telling what might happen if they started to haze him. Four of the boys came in at supper time; there were three more who were out having a look at the fences and Charley said they might not be back for a couple of days. The quartet took one look into the kitchen and then made a quick start for the bunk house, where there was more serubbing and shaving within the space of half an hour than Underwood's ranch money on specialists and I know. I am-and I'm a wreck."

"It doesn't worry me; I'm perfectly calm," retorted Saily.

There was a good deal of that kind of conversation all afternoon. The h Wreck had an idea that if he could get her really angry she might forget about the sheriff for a while. But the only times she got angry were when she thought about Bob Wells, and then she was just as likely to be laughing again the next minute. As for getting angry at the Wreck, she refused. It was a form of comfort that was denied her, for some unaccountable reason.

"Bob Wells ought to have more sense than to let anybody fill him up with a fool story about four highwaymen," she said, as she sat down to peel potatoes for supper. "Why, there isn't any such thing as even one road agent, nowadays."

"We even have 'em in Pittsburg. Sally.

"Pittsburg! I'm tired of hearing BOTHER YOU ANY." about Pittsburg, You'd think the sun rose and set in Pittsburg." "Not if you lived there," said the stand 'em."

The boys at Underwood's ranch even fell to cleaning their finger nails as they watched her, Somehow, without even so much as suggesting it by word or look, Sally had a way of creating in others-men, usuallyan impulse to be neat. She did not mind having the boys sitting around the kitchen, even though they did not belong there until they were told to come and get supper. There was, however, one feature that bothered her. She had chosen to be from the east, like the Wreck, and it was not easy to play the part. There were lots of things that a tenderfoot was not supposed to know, or say, and it kept her constantly on guard to remember the fact. She found it safer to confine herself to "Yea." 'No," and "Really?" so far as it was possible. The boys laid it to shyness, although that was not one of her traits.

Just as she feared, they found the Wreck amusing. A good deal of the conversation centered around his spectacles, which he wore, except "Did you ever take one of them to for excursions into the dining room. But some rare policy of restraint seemed to have settled upon him; he calmly ignored most of what they said, and when he did answer it was with an apparent good nature that "Did you ever sit on a front porch surprised Sally. # * How a Trip to Dixon

It's Simple Arithmetic

Saves You Money

The more people there are who do their buying in a store, the greater saving there is in it for you.

Dixon merchants would rather make one dollar profit on each of three sales than two dollars on one sale. That puts us one dollar ahead on what we sell and saves you one dollar on what you buy. You benefit and we benefit, it is mutual.

Dixon merchants are determined to increase Dixon's volume very much more this year. However, we are not waiting until the volume is increased to give you bigger values; we are giving you the values in advance.

We want the people who live in the country around Dixon to feel that they are a part of this community; they naturally will come to Dixon to trade. That will enable the merchants to do a larger volume, and it will mean a saving for everyone.

We would like to have you come in and get acquainted with us real soon. We will be glad to meet you and we feel that you will find it pleasant and profitable to get acquainted with us.
